
If you have Microsoft Office 2007 or later installed on Windows, this article will help you find the confirmation code for the product. The confirmation codes for Microsoft Office are a 16-digit number similar to a serial number that allows a user to install a product without having to enter a valid product key or use any validation tokens. By running the following command, users can generate their own personal unique code: `mspclock -s ___` That's all there is to it! If you need some more help with this process, try searching on Google.com or WebSearch.com.

<https://support.microsoft.com/en-us/kb/940865> If you have a product key that is not valid for Office 2007, follow the steps below to find the confirmation code for Office 2007: A 16 character code can be generated by running this command: <https://support.microsoft.com/en-us/kb/940865> Office Professional 2007 has a product key, but it is an OEM key and can only be used on OEM hardware and cannot be used to install Office Professional on a consumer's computer without the input of a valid MSDN subscription and purchase of Volume License Rights (VLRs). The Product key mentioned for Office Professional 2007 is "XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX". This key will not work to install regular retail editions of Office on any computer other than the computer it is preinstalled on. Very few copies of this product were produced, and they are exclusively owned by the original equipment manufacturer (OEM). The Product Key that comes with Professional Plus 2007 can only be used to install this exact copy on one computer at a time. If you need more installs, you would have to buy more copies or buy Volume Licenses Rights (VLRs). You will not be able to install the same version on multiple computers. The "XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX-XXXXX" key will not work for that. To find out if your computer is eligible for OEM or Retail, visit the Microsoft Download Center and search for the product key under either Amd64 or Xp. It appears as though this article contains a few errors as it states that the code from the above instructions would allow you to install Office on a consumer's computer without a valid MSDN subscription and purchase of Volume License Rights (VLRs). This is wrong as Office Professional 2007 only comes with a Product Key which allows you to install this version on just one computer at a time. The same Product Key will not work to install Retail edition of Office on another computer, so it would obviously not be necessary to buy additional copies of Office Professional 2007 to run on other computers. You cannot use these keys for the Home and Student Edition of Office, nor can you use these keys with any other editions of Office except whatever edition came with your purchase. You can only install the same version on one computer at a time and cannot mix and match different versions.
